Overview

The practice of honorary degrees has a long and rich history in academia. It is intended to honor a person who has attained and sustained notable achievement in academia, the professions, or public service. Georgia Health Sciences University can select one or two outstanding individuals to be honored with a Doctor of Science degree at its annual May commencement ceremony, according to the process outlined below.

Process/Procedures

In October of each year, the Provost will solicit written nominations for honorary degrees from the faculty and Student Government Association of Georgia Health Sciences University. The nomination letter, with biographical sketch attached, must contain compelling reasons for the institution to honor a particular individual. Any supporting documentation that may be helpful to the review committee may be appended. Criteria for an honorary degree include an extraordinary contribution to Georgia Health Sciences University, to health care, health education, or to medical science. Individuals not eligible for honorary degrees by Board of Regents policy are: current elected or appointed state (including Regents) or national officials; announced candidates for elective office; current faculty, administrative officers, or employees of Georgia Health Sciences University, the University System, or another institution in the System; and any individual previously awarded an honorary degree from a University System institution.

No later than November 15 of each year, a Review Committee selected by the President from his Cabinet will evaluate the nominations and submit no more than three nominees to the President. Upon receipt, the President will consult with the other research and regional university and senior college presidents to insure that there is no duplication of candidates; will review the nominations, and may select one or two candidate(s) for submission to the Chancellor for Board of Regents consideration. No announcement of a pending candidacy shall be made prior to its formal submission to the Board. Candidates for honorary degrees should be submitted to the Chancellor’s office by December 1.

The Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs & Provost will notify the nominator(s) of the Board’s decision(s). If approved, the Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs & Provost will also notify the candidate and the Vice President for Student Services and Development so commencement arrangements can be facilitated.
